The interior of the theatre will be made highly attractive in its decorations. The color scheme will be old rose, ivory and gold. The stage will be equipped with a full set of scenery of highly artistic design. The Play House will be brilliantly illuminated with electric lights and will be equipped with modern heating and ventilating applicances and the management is sparing no pains or expense in their efforts to give the people of the town a cosy, pretty and comfortably play house, in which refined and delightful entertainment will be given.

Performances will be continuous every afternoon and evening at 2 and 7 P. M.

Small Sums Welcome.

George E. Harker, member of the press committee of the centennial celebration, desires that public attention be called to the centennial button and medals that the committee has on sale and advocates a liberal use of them in order to stir up general enthusiasm in the celebration.

Mr. Harker also states that contributions to the centennial fund are acceptable in any amounts and a contribution of a quarter or a half-dollar from those whose circumstances will not permit of their giving more, will be just as much appreciated as the larger gifts of those in better circumstances.

Collectors for the centennial fund have found some people under the impression that as a big celebration is under way, big contributions are in order and that their ordinary modest contributions towards the annual Fourth of July celebration would be out of place in this case. That is a mistake and the people should be so informed.

Mr. Harker says we should not let false pride influence us at this time. Let each give what he can afford. It is from small things that the larger things are made up. We need every penny we can get. We want this to be a celebration of all the people—let all the people take part, whether the part is great or small. There are collectors for all neighborhoods; if any have failed to contribute, take what you can to the collector's house or give or send it to the treasurer, H. B. Davis. Let everyone respond.

The Eagle Rock Quarry Company has donated to the centennial celebration committee, the broken stone to be used in the construction of the foundation for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument.
